BARCLAY ON BRIDGE By Shepard Barclay

WHEN YOU lead against a suit contract a card which wins the trick, and you then repeat the suit, it is usually important that you select the right card. The correct one can be highly informative to your partner, in giving him information about the rest of your suit, and sometimes about other parts of your hand. Choice of an incorrect card may misguide him and wreck the entire defensive work of your side.

If you lead high against a 4-Heart contract and win the first trick, your second lead is extremely important from any of the fol lowing spade holdings:

♠ A K 8 6 5 2. ♠ A K Q 6 5 4. A A 3 ♠ A 9 8 5 4 3 2 8. ♠ K Q J 4. With either No. 1 or No. 2, your first lead should be the K, as it is conventional that opening an ace against a suit contract denies possession of the king. The second lead, if you repeat the suit, should be the A in the first case and the Q in the second. If the equence in the second hand had extended as low as the J, that would have been the lead. Presenting the bottom of the sequence on the second lead lets your partner know what all your honors are in the suit.

With No. 3 you lead the A and follow with the K, reversing the usual order, to show you are now blank in the suit and ready to ruff it. With No. 4 you lead the A and then the 3. If your partner can read the second card as your lowest, he may know you hold no more. So with No. 5, after the A for 7-No Trumps?

you should lead not the 3, but the 6, and with No. 6, after the A you should lead the 6 to let him know you have one, possibly two,

With No. 7, your A lead is in the hope of catching him with a singleton, able to ruff the next lead. If he does that, he will want to get you in the lead again, so you can give him another ruff. ## Call "Election News" Persons wishing election returns tonight should call 'Election News' and not The Evening Times and Cumberland News office by telephone numbers. No calls will be answered from editorial room numbers. Simply call "Election News" and results will be heard in a continuous broadcast. Calling in any other way will mean delay and will tend to complicate a system which has been found to work equally well for the inquirer and for the office. Service will begin at 9:30 Those calling "Election
